DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 5,004,969 to Schanin.

Regarding claim 1, Schanin disclose:

an AC voltage generator which feeds an AC voltage into a load circuit (column 1 lines 13-15);

a load circuit which contains at least one lamp and is designed such that the phase of the current which flows in the load circuit is determined with reference to the applied AC voltage, essentially by at least one component which conducts a current which flows through filaments (column 1 lines 23-42); and a device for measuring the phase of the current which flows in the load circuit with reference to the applied AC voltage wherein the operating device is disconnected as soon as the above-named device for measuring phase detects a phase angle which violates a prescribed limiting value (column 1 lines 14-22).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schanin in view of U.S. Patent No. 5,181,026 to Granville.

Regarding claim 2, Schanin does not disclose measuring time between the zero-crossing AC voltage supplied by the AC voltage generator and zero-crossing of the load circuit current. Granville discloses power transmission monitoring circuit including measuring time between the zero-crossing AC voltage supplied by the AC voltage generator and zero-crossing of the load circuit current (column 3 lines 41-50). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include zero-crossing measurements as taught by Granville into Schanin for the purpose of calculating current phase angle (column 3 lines 59-68).

Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schanin in view of U.S. Patent No. 6,300,777 to Ribarich.

Regarding claim 3, Schanin does not disclose a capacitor whose current flows through the filament. Ribarich discloses that it is well known to include a capacitor whose current flows through the filament (Fig. 1 element C) in a lamp circuit. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include a capacitor as taught by Ribarich into Schanin for the purpose of providing a indication of the voltage stored in the parallel lamp branch.

Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schanin in view of U.S. Patent No. 5,925,990 to Crouse et al..

Regarding claim 4, Schanin does not disclose an optocoupler for triggering disconnection of the operating device. Crouse et al. discloses an optocoupler for triggering disconnection of the operating device at the input of the AC voltage generator to filaments (column 7 lines 55-64). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to include an optocoupler as taught by Crouse et al. into Schanin for the purpose of improving efficiency of the electronic operating device (column 7 lines 60-63).

Claims 5 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schanin and Crouse et al. as applied to claim 4 above, and further in view of U.S. Patent No. 6,008,593 to Ribarich.

Regarding claim 5, Schanin does not disclose a disconnection logic circuit which contains at least one trigger and a timing element which supplies a signal which disconnects the operating device via the input of the AC voltage generator. Ribarich discloses disconnection logic circuit which contains at least one trigger and a timing element which supplies a signal which disconnects the operating device via the input of the AC voltage generator (column 6 lines 20-26). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include a disconnection logic circuit as taught by Ribarich into Schanin and Crouse et al. for the purpose of providing automatic restarting of the electronic operating device (column 6 lines 21-23).

Regarding claim 6, Schanin does not disclose an input to the disconnection circuit connected to the output of the optocoupler. Crouse et al. discloses input to the disconnection circuit/microcontroller connected to the output of the optocoupler (column 7 lines 58-60). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include connection of the optocoupler to the disconnection circuit as taught by Crouse et al. into Schanin for the purpose of identifying condition of gas discharge lamp (column 8 lines 5-10).

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-6 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
